

PUBLIC NOTICE

OCT. 28, 2020-The Crow Tribal Court found lay advocate Michelle Wilson in contempt and disbarred her from practicing law in the Crow Tribal Court on October 28, 2020 for failing to comply with the terms of discipline orders previously issued by the Court, ongoing violations of the Crow Tribal Court Rules of Professional Conduct; including failing to return money received from a client for legal services that were not rendered, for more than five years. In its order, the Court noted Wilson's prior history of noncompliance with disciplinary orders of the Court and explicit warnings given to Wilson that continued noncompliance could subject her to disbarment. The Court further found that Wilson's prior Court ordered obligations to repay former clients, remain in full force and effect and authorized such obligations to be enforced as judgements of the Crow Tribal Court.
